NEWS FROM THE SOUTHWEST.

LOUISVILLE, August 8, 1862. The remains of General Robert McCook arrived this af. ternoon from Nashville. They were escorted from the depot to the Galt House by a portion of the cavalry and infantry of the provost guard.

Paymaster Speed has just arrived from Corinth. He reports the safety of all the paymasters stated to have een recently captured near Humboldt. The story arose from the destruction of the trestie work (on the 28th uit.) of the Mobile and Ohio Raffroad, ten miles north of Jack-son, by 150 of Baxter's rebel guerillas. Hariton, the senior paymaster, stopped over night at Humboldt, pro-ceeding next day, after the repair of the railroad, to Co rinth, where he telegraphed the paymasters destined fo Corinth to come down. The remainder of them, who left Louisville with the former, went, in discharge of their duty, to Memphis and Nashville

Colonel McLeod Murphy Not Dead. TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

MARLEM, August 8, 1862. My attention has been called to an announcement in the Albany papers of my death. Whoever originated the story did so from no honorable motive. The best energies of my life have been given to the service of the country, and I think no one will deny the public record, that I was among the first in the Senate to rebuke this and rebellion, and to piend with weak and unwilling men for its suppression.

When my physical condition institues it I will return to my regiment, to share again its vicissitudes. It the interim I hope no one will attempt to repeat to my family the cruel joke that I am dead.

Our Special Army Correspondence. WESTOVER LANDING, August 7, 1862. Active Movements in Prospect—The Work on the Opposite Side of the James—Where is the Enemy—Value of Treasury Notes in the Ribel Capital, &c.

It is believed that the campaign of inactivity is nearing its close. An earnest of what may be expected is the cannon, heard again on that memorable field where so many of our gallant soldiers so bravely fought and fell a short month since, has a sound of welcome, and brought with it joy and hope for the future. While our troops are holding that field so daringly snatched from the euemy, there are other tokens of activity closer at hand, and that, too, in search of the foe. The latter activity is that inaugurated across the river the day after the rebels so magnanimously treated us to that grand pyrotechnic display. Every day troops armed with rifles and axes have crossed the stream, did what hunting after the enemy pleased them, and folled trees with the alacrity of veteran woodcutters. Yesterday a brigade crossed, and was the first of our men remaining over night. They took two days' rations with them. The boys like it immensely. With their gallant General at their head, they went away in most excellent spirits, and that too, notwithstanding a rumor that the enemy were going to give our next delegation a warm reception. They like the change because it stirs them up. And it is quite a change; for there are fresh fruits, rare fields of meadow hand, corn fields growing undisturbed, blackberries incalculably abundant and geese and chickens to-be had for the chasing. The brigade bivour acked last evening seven miles and a half back of the river, on the road to Fetersburg. Thus far they have seen nothing of the enemy.

Reminiscences of Malvern Hill—The Confidence of the Proops in Themselves—Sick Soldiers Rapidly Belurning to their Commands-The Draft-The Return of Exchange Prisoners de.

characterized this army has, within the last two or three days, been relieved, and it is now looking to even more stirring scenes and experiences than those already re-ported. The advance to and reoccupation of Malvern Hill, and the occupation and picketting of the opposite bank of the James river, have given employment to a portion of the troops, and has imparted confidence that we are not to be allowed to just out while awaiting reinforcements. The effect upon the spirits and determination of the men produced by these movements is most but small loss also affords satisfaction, and it is to be hoped that this may continue to be the case. The robels but small loss also allows statistaction, and it is to be the case. The rebels will not, however, sit down quietly under our occupation of Malvern Hill, and it will probably lead to an engage ment, mest likely to-day or to-morrow. They were reported during last night to be advancing upon that point with a large force, and preparations have been made upon our part to give them a warm reception. They have already received one severe puoishment, and had one large army almost distroyed at this battle ground; and they will, doubless, experience a repetition of this penishment if they renew the attack. It will be remembered that the battle at Malvern Hill was the last and most severe fight, after the Gainer' Mill battle, of the seven days, and resulted in a great slaughter of the enemy and their complete repulse and disconfiture. So great was their loss and exhaustion after this battle that they were unable to further follow up our retreating columns; and they have made no serious demonstrations against us since. It is, indeed, a fatal spot to them; and before this reaches you, it may/again have witnessed a severe chastisement of the traitorous hordes. It is not proper, of course, for me to detail what troops occupy the Hill, or what preparations have been made to support them in case of an attack; but everything is believed to be completed to insure a new triumph to the army and the cause.

Outside of these movements there is but little news to itili, or what preparations have been made to support than in case of an attack; but everything is believed to be completed to insure a new triumph to the army and the cause.

Outside of these movements there is but little news to communicate to your readers. That portion of the army not engaged in them have been, as usual, employed in their driks and reviews, and preparing for future operations. Day before yeaterday morning, when the cannonading was heard from Maivern Hill, and the soldiers learned what it meant—for so secretly and quietly had the move been made that it was known to but few outside of those engaged in it—it seemed to inspire them with new life and energy. All were cager to learn the result, but I heard no expression of doubt as to our success. Notwithstanding the severe fighting we have had with the rebels, the army has not lost its confidence in its own prowess; but officers and men feel that, nuless under overwhelmingly disadvantageous circumstances, they are sure of defeating and destroying any rebol force that may be brought against them.

The health of the army, and particularly of this corps, continues to improve, notwithstanding the intense heat which we are experiencing. The fatal malarious effects of a residence in this locality, which was to cause so great a loss of the strength and personnel of the army, do not yet show themselves, as was producted.

The number of officers and soldiers leaving on sick leaves and furloughs has been materially reduced, and the recent order requiring the return of those now absent by the Itih of this month, is causing the tide to set this way. Every boat brings up a number of these absolutes to join their regiments. From this cause alone the ranks of the army will receive a considerable reinforcement. The news brought in the Hisana hast evening, of the President's call for three hundred thousand militia, in addition to the late call for volunteers, gave great satisfaction. Expressions of gratification and approval of this evidence that the government had at last become awakened to the extent and proportions of the contest in which we are engaged, were everywhere heard. It was time that we should learn wisdom from the robeis, and by preparations something nearly equal to their own, be prepared to meet and subdue the robeis non something like equal terms. These new troops should be made ready and sont forward with all possible despatch. They are needed now, and every day's delay but so much longer prolongs the conflict. The rebellion must be reushed, and that speedily, if it is to be defaated at all; and the government has at length got upon the right track to do it effectually. We must no longer be outnumbered or outgeneralled at any point, and future battle fields must witness not only a defeat of the enemy, but a sufficient reserve force to follow up the victory and reap the bonefits which should attend it.

Last evening the first of the exchanged prisoners under the recent arrangement with the rebel authorities were received. Almest every regiment here had more or less of its members in this detachment, and as the man reached the encampments they were received with heart-felt rejoicing and congratuations by their comrades. Loud cheers greeted some of the more popular of the number, and there was a scene of general rejoicing throughout the camps. Each one of these men were soon surrounded by a crowd of sage listeners, to whom they detailed their experiences and aufferings in the robet prisons. All concur in stating that their fare was very bad. The rebel soldiers themselves are fed upon short rations of four, and badly cured bacon, and their supplies even of these are in danger of being cut off as to join their regiments. From this cause alone the ranks

HARRISON'S LANDING, August 2, 1882. The Rebels at Work on the Right Bank of the James-One

The Robest at Work on the Right Bank of the James—Our Irongs Cross the River to Fight Them—Destruction of the Robet Hiding Places, de.

The excitement caused by the sudden appearance of the enemy on the south bank of the James river, with several batteries, and the shelling of our shipping and camps, has to a great extent subsided, and the daring of the scholar products of the scholar pr the rebels is wondered at to place a siege battery directly opposite to us, in spite of the many gunboats concentrated at City Point and others perambulating the river. The act was as daring as it would have proved disastrous, only that the rebels are poor gunners, and that the guess are good for nothing, inasmuch as nearly 300 unex-ploded shells were picked up near the landing. Old arploded shells were picked up near the landing. Old artillerists who witnessed the bombardment compute the number of shots fired by the rebels at 500. Had all these missilas executed what their owners intended, our camp would have suffered terribly. As it was, very little harm was done. The shots that struck the vessels did no more damage than to let daylight into them; but no one was killed on the water, the shots in numerous instances falling outside of the advanced post of our army.

In order that the rebels may not have all the play to themselves, Gen. McClellan ordered two regiments of infantry across the river for the purpose of burning several houses located on an ominence opposite the landing which sheltered the enemy when out on their forays. The troops were embarked on a ferryboat, and in a very few minutes landed on the south bank of the river. Two gunboats covered the landing of the regiments; but no enemy appeared to dispute the occupation of his domeins.

cenemy appeared to dispute the occupation of his domains.

The order in regard to firing the buildings was strictly carried out, and shortly after our soldiers had deburked from the vessel conveying them across dense volumes of black smoke arose slowly to the horizon, and lazily curled its way towards Petersburg. About two hours after the first house was ignited the sun went down, bright flames took the place of the dense volumes of black smoke and illuminated the sky for miles around. From the blaffs of this landing the sight presented by the burning mass was the most sublime and brilliant. The hissing flames greedily devoured the wooden buildings, which were very soon beyond saving, even should the enemy think of such a thing.

The two regiments then re-embarked from the scene of destruction and came back to camp. The fire opposite, however, lasted until late at night, casting a lurid glare all around the shipping in the river. Old muddy and torpid James river was for once quietly disposed; not a ripple was seen on its bosom, and the reflection of the brilliant flames presented a most beautiful sight.

We hardly expected the enemy to repeat their daring feat of the night previous during last night; but on firing their first shot such a volley would have greeted their from our immense batteries that "skeddding" would have taken the place of artillery practice, and our camp would have been left alone. We are preparing for any emergency that may arise, and the affair of night before last was merely a diversion by the rebels to keep their hands in at handling field pleces.

in the wee sma' hours, and disturbed the cogitations of the guard. Whatever may have been the cause of the alarm, it must be admitted that the picket of the Nine toenth Wisconsin behaved very questionably. They made no effort to ascertain the cause of their alarm, but rushed pell-mell into town like panic stricken fools as inculeate more wisdom among his men for the future, that they disturb not the citizens' quiet again by such white livered demonstrations. But it was rather exciting to hear the long roll beat at dead of night after

Whatever may have been the causes of complaint against Gen. Viele heretofore, I am inclined to believe that they have been removed and that he is now doing all in the power of man to bring matters straight in this community. Any one who will take the trouble to investigate matters as they now exist here will be satisfied that any strictures upon Gen. Viele's course are decidedly unjust. If lenity has been exercised there is none now, except such as the common dictates of humanity imperatively demand. Time has worked a wondrous change here in the community, and a little mouth seems to have revolutionized almost everything. We have had cause to question the policy, which has seemed to strengthen the sympathy with the rebellion, with the female portion of the inhabitants of Norfolk; but a later light convinces me that the public service has not really suffered in consequence of any act of General Viele's toward that distressed class. In a majority of cases the females who have called upon the Gevernor have appeared as supplicants for sesistance to keep them from actual suffering, and the only favors which have been extended to them have been to the extent of relieving their pressing wants. Pride and poverty are twin asters in this community, and many secossion dames who have visited the Custom flowe, apparent occupants of the lap of luxury and ease, I know have been driven there by the force of starvation and to obtain from the Military Gevernor means to keep soul and body together, not to secure favors for recusant secessionists; and the General, to the extent of his means, has been the almoner to all classes slike, Union or secession. I make this explanation cheerfully, and the more so because I have been as outspoken as any one in relation to Gen. Viele. I have opposed his conciliation policy earnestly, as much in a spirit of friendship for him as for the Union people whom I deemed were being depressed and discouraged by it. But conciliation is no longer the word. The people of Norfolk have been windighed in th against Gon. Viele heretofore, I am inclined to believ

THE STATE'S QUOTA OF TROOFS FILLED UP UNDER THE FIRST CALL—PROBABILITY OF MO DRAFT TAKING FLACE IN THIS STATE.

According to despatches received at the Quartermaster General's office, the State's quota of treeps required under the new call—flifty-two thousand men—is new filled up. The city, however, is behindhand; but the State has made up for this deficiency. Recruiting is still progressing rapidly, and hopes are entertained that the men required under the last call will be furnished from New York State without resorting to the disagreeable necessity of a draft. General Arthur weat to Albany on Friday night, is order to confer with the Governor upon these matters, and should a draft be determined upon the orders in relation to the same will probably be furnished to-morrow.

A report has been going around that the sons of Mayor Opdyke have gone to Europe to avoid being drafted. This is false, as is learned from those who know the facts well. MEETING OF THE COMMITTEE ON NATIONAL DEFENCES. The Joint Committee of the Common Council on National Defences met yesterday afternoon, Alderman Farley in Alderman Smith called up the subject of the resolution offered by him in the Board of Aldermen in reference to giving a regimental fund to those regiments of militia from this city, now in the field, who would volunteer for the war or for sine months, at the expiration of their term of three months service. He was for giving a fund of $10,000 to each regiment when 800 strong, and $50 to each man comprising it as a bounty.

Alderman Farloy thought $2,000 would be enough for the regimental fund, and he would concur with Alderman Smith in giving $50 bounty to the men.

Other members of the committee differed from both these views, and it was finally agreed to report a resolution in favor of giving a regimental fund of $10,000, but not offering any bounty.

The message of the Mayor on the subject of the harbor defences was next taken up.

Councilman Hogan thought the best way to defend the harbor would be to take Richmond, and in this view most of the members concurred.

Councilman Hogan offered a resolution to the effect that a sub-committee of three he appointed to confer with the Mayor upon the subject and report to the committee at the next meeting.

The committee then adjourned till to-morrow at noon.

THE IRISE BRIGADE-ORDERS PROM GEN, MEAGHER. Yesterday a detachment of the recruits for the Irish Brigade realized the United States bounty from the disbursing officer of New York. A further sum of ten dollars a man has been specially appropriated by the Committee of the Produce Exchange as an additional inducement for the next three hundred men enlisted, from the 5th inst., for the brigade. These, and the State and city bountes, have kept up a spirited recruiting at the head-quarters of the Irish Brigade, where large detachments now await transportation to the army of the Potomac. Another feature of success, during the last three days, of the recruiting for the Irish Brigade, was the hanging out of rich, new flags, one of which (the glorious Stars and Stripes) sumptuously fans the thoroughfare, and is appropriately flanked on either side by Irish flags, one a green, telling that there, at the corner of Broadway and Walker street, are the "Headquartors of the Irish Brigade." while the other, wreathed in shamrocks, and having the Irish harp in the centre, invokes "Irish patriots to rally to sustain the Sixty-third, Sixty-ninth and Eighty-eighth regiments of the Irish Brigade, who have gallantly served their adopted country on the following battle fields:—Fair Oaks, Chickahominy, Mechanicsville, Savage Station, Nelson's Farm, Malvern Hill, &c."

In connection with the further movements of the brigade, and those belonging to it in this city, General Meagher has issued the following order:—
